Comments: Apparently the Human Rights Commission is deciding whether to allow 3 years to develop an assessment tool for disabled workers replacing the grossly unfair BSWAT. I think 3 years is outrageous. This affects the wages and ability to live a healthy life of disabled people, especially those with an ID. No employed person should be paid less than we can reasonably expect a person to live. That is happening now due to this ridiculous measure. If experienced and qualified people are put on to the task, it shouldn't take 3 years to develop a tool. They are hardly starting from scratch.
