

Submission 47

██████████ for ten years during the 1980s I was exposed to various levels of sexual harassment from colleagues. One incident that particularly stands out was when a work colleague called me over to speak with him. He showed me a magazine which displayed images of bestiality - of a woman having sex with a dog. The work colleague would have been in his 30s and I was 20 years old. I had only known him as a work colleague and had no reason to be suspicious when he wanted to speak with me, as I thought it was a work related matter. I was embarrassed and stunned. I had no words or strategies to react to this. I never reported this as I knew it would not have been taken seriously or that I would have been considered a 'troublemaker' with 'no sense of humour' etc. During my ████████ training at ██████████ one of my friends was chased ██████████ by ██████████ and raped. In addition as a young female ████████ arriving with other female ████████ to ████████ we were greeted with howls and barking noises from the male ██████████ - we were soon to find out we were considered 'dogs' or 'bikes'.
