

Anti-racism eLearning course

Overview

The Australian Human Rights Commission has a range of eLearning courses available to organisations and businesses. These accessible and engaging courses provide participants with self-paced learning on human rights-related topics.

The Anti-racism eLearning course aims to improve participants' understanding of racism and its impacts as well as their ability to address racist behaviours in their daily life and in the workplace.

This self-paced eLearning course takes 2-3 hours to complete.

Key learning outcomes

- Increased understanding of racism as a concept and experience
- Increased understanding of race and racism in the Australian context
- Increased awareness of the impacts of racism
- Increased range of strategies and tools to address racism
- Increased skills for effective bystander action.

What's included

- Invitation and registration services (if required)
- Certificates of completion
- Provision of basic reporting data (e.g. names of people who have completed the course) if required

The course is hosted on the Australian Human Rights Commission's Learning Management System (LMS). Contact us to discuss licensing agreements for hosting the course on your own LMS.

Cost

$59 + GST per person
Minimum 10 people.

Where an eLearning course is purchased for 50+ participants, minor customisation is included at no additional cost, for example, the inclusion of references to internal policies and sector/organisation-specific case studies. A quote for more substantial customisation can be provided upon request.

Contact us to discuss your organisation's training needs or to obtain a quote. Email training@humanrights.gov.au.