The complaint process

for complaints about discrimination in employment based on religion, criminal record, trade union activity, sexual preference, political opinion and social origin

The Australian Human Rights Commission is an independent body which investigates and resolves complaints about discrimination and breaches of human rights.

You can make a complaint no matter where you live in Australia and it doesn't cost anything to make a complaint. The steps in the complaint process are outlined below.

Make an enquiry

- If you are unsure if you can make a complaint about something, you can contact the Commission's Complaint Information Service by phone on 1300 656 419 or by email to complaintsinfo@humanrights.gov.au
- · We can send you a complaint form to start the process.
- If we can't help you, we will try to refer you to someone who can.

Make a complaint

- A complaint must be in writing. You can fill in a complaint form and post or fax it back to us or you can lodge a complaint online on our website. (www.humanrights.gov.au)
- You can make a complaint in your preferred language and we can help you write down your complaint if necessary.
- · You do not need a lawyer to make a complaint.
- If we cannot deal with your complaint, we will explain why.

Investigation

- We will contact you to talk about your complaint and we may ask you to provide more information.
- Generally, the Commission will contact the person or organisation you are complaining about, provide them with a copy of your complaint and ask for their comments and other relevant information. We will let you know what they have said in response to your complaint.

- In some cases we may decide not to continue to deal with your complaint. If this happens, we will explain why.
- We may talk to you about trying to resolve the complaint by conciliation.

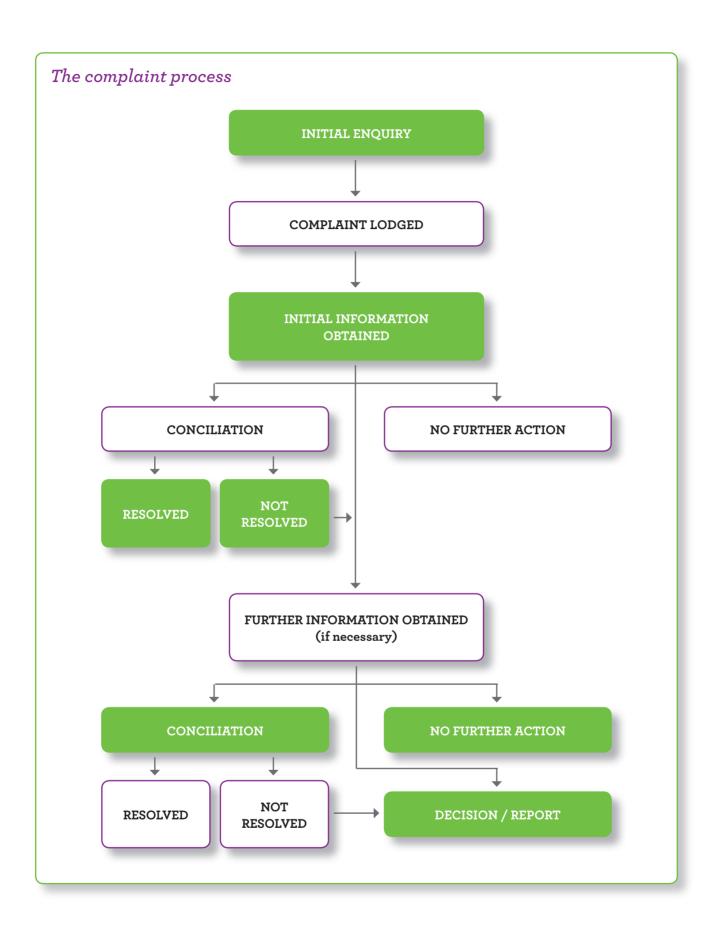

Conciliation

- Conciliation means that we try to help you and the person or organisation you are complaining about try to find a way to resolve the matter.
- Conciliation can take place in a face-to-face meeting called a 'conciliation conference' or through a telephone conference. In some cases complaints can be resolved through an exchange of letters or by passing messages through the conciliator.
- Complaints can be resolved in many different ways.
 For example by an apology, a change of policy or compensation.

Decision

- If the complaint is not resolved or discontinued for some other reason, the President of the Commission will decide if discrimination has occurred. This might involve the President holding a public hearing where each side presents their version of events and answers questions.
- If the President is satisfied that discrimination has occurred, the President will report the matter to the federal Attorney-General. In the report, the President can recommend compensation for any loss or injury a person has experienced. The report must be tabled in Parliament.
- Examples of the President's decisions about discrimination are available on the Commission's website at www.humanrights.gov.au/legal/ humanrightsreports/index.html

Complaint Information Service

telephone 1300 656 419 or (02) 9284 9888 web www.humanrights.gov.au/complaints_information email complaintsinfo@humanrights.gov.au